A SOULLESS LIFE.

I knew a woman, who held in a strong fine body a soul as sensitive as a wind-harp, every breath made it vibrate, tender melodies, the white and classic beauty of a statue, the tones of color in painting, the subtle thought and stately flow of a poem, the song of a bird, sunlight on the sea, the velvet bloom and curve of a woman's cheek, the muscles sloping under the brown skin of a man, even the yellow eyes of a happy hearted daisy, all filled her sensuous soul with exhausting, unspeakable rapture.

In like proportions were her griefs, all harsh, all unlovely things jarred upon her as cruel, jangling discords, and sounds that to healthier more robust natures were but as bramble scratches, to this fooled, sensitive spirit were as the thrust of a dagger whose wounds rankled forever.

By one of those inexplicable decisions of immutable fate this woman was placed among surroundings that required a spiritual equipoise like that of her [illegible]. No more intolerable life for such a nature may be conceived. Her wild struggles against her destiny were in vain, for the walls of implacable circumstances are not beaten down by any flutterings, even the most passionate.

On a still black night, after long years of spiritual travail and unending torment, her soul died within her. She felt that a change was upon her lain all in lily white along her virgin couch, staring with wide eyes into the blackness that clasped her all about touched faintly with awe, but most conscious of supreme exhaustion knowing that the end had come.

The [illegible] struggle that raged within her was wearing toward its close. Was it bodily death? She hoped [illegible] it was and not [illegible] yet some shrink [illegible] the bravest feel [illegible] and dreadful [illegible]. What was to come [illegible] of breath? Oblivion [illegible] but [illegible] she did not fear it [illegible] an life

[illegible] will be."

[illegible] pulsing of her [illegible] voluntary struggle [illegible] convulsive flicker [illegible] when the oil is all gone [illegible] straightly with her [illegible] waited calmly, [illegible] what might come. [illegible] to and fro of [illegible] before her and [illegible] things she yearned [illegible] toward oblivion [illegible] toward utter dark [illegible] heart throbbed but [illegible] her soul slipped from her [illegible] more faintly and died.

All [illegible] of darkness she lay [illegible] nor [illegible] the overthrown [illegible] black desert nights [illegible] to him, but a [illegible]. The dawn did [illegible] to song. Her [illegible] no longer filled her with [illegible] feeling was [illegible] she was as one paralyzed [illegible] the body.

[illegible] with faint surprise at first when she [illegible] her pleasures gone also [illegible] no longer thrilled her, beauty had lost its power. She tried sometimes to [illegible] emotion again to spur [illegible] old hates, her fervid predilections, but ever fell back after the effort with a calm realization of the uselessness of it. Long deep thought showed her the truth at last, and the only [illegible] she knew was desire to conceal [illegible] effort a madman makes to hide [illegible] of mind.

She [illegible] any one's eyes, fearing they might see through the [illegible] how dark and empty [illegible] or keeping her lids lowered as a woman who loves, or a man [illegible] a drug mounting to his brain.

[illegible] fully she always said the things she had [illegible] to say, fierce, scornful [illegible] her fervid feelings had been [illegible] with precision but mechanically as one who feels the [illegible] form and though [illegible] he must say painfully [illegible] his own words as from thousands of [illegible] mingled with the gigantic [illegible] and vaguely wonders what they mean, what ideas they represent.

And so lived out the long life allotted by unrelenting destiny, undetected save once by a man who loved her, a man with very subtle instincts who looking deeply in her eyes started away with fear he could not pierce the depth of those dark wells.

He left her full of awe, as one who had seen the dead rise and walk, and grasping into the dark after the vague trail that ever just eluded his grasp. [illegible] only once did the tears ever come [illegible] vacant eyes, when she stood by the grave of one she had loved [illegible] a faint pathos in her absence of grief.

At last the flame having died out, the fuel slowly fell to cold gray ashes.

Krupp's Fifty-Ton Hammer.

Chicago Tribune.

The great fifty ton hammer in Krupp's works at Essen gained its name "Unser Fritz" and the inscription it bears, "Fritz, lass dy!" in the following manner: When, in 1877, the Emperor William visited Essen the steam hammer attracted his attention. Krupp presented to him the machinist, Fritz, who he said, handled the hammer with such nicety and precision as not to injure or touch an object placed in the center of the block. The emperor at once put his diamond-studded watch on the spot indicated and beckoned to the machinist to set the hammer in motion. Fritz hesitated out of consideration for the precious object, but Krupp urged him on by saying, "Fritz, lot fly!" Down came the hammer, and the watch remained untouched. The emperor gave it to the machinist as a souvenir, and Krupp added 1,000 marks to the present.

The Cyclone's Doings.

[Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser.]

Mr. E. H. Olcott sends us a postal card from Jasper, Pickens county, Ga., the 17th inst., in which he states that a sign board marked "Six miles to Montgomery, Ala." was found up there in the mountains after the cyclone passed Jasper. It is 250 miles, he says, from Jasper to Montgomery by the railroads, and it is quite evident that the sign found must have been carried by the cyclone that long distance.

Coughs and Colds

Are the inevitable results of sudden changes in the weather. Immediate attention should be given them so that they may not become established and result in Bronchitis, Congestion, Inflammation or even consumption. Hamilton's Cough Balsam soothes the irritated membrane, and assists in removing Phlegm and Mucus, that, by its adhesion to the membranes, causes Violent Coughing. Great relief is received by even those in the Last Stages of Consumption. In croup and whooping cough it is unequaled. Price 25 cents per bottle. Sold by A. B. Armstrong and E. B. McCoy.

WHITE Pine Petroleum Hoof Ointment, for hard and feverish hoofs. Sold by E. F. Richmond & Son. Price 25 cts.

THE BOUQUET BUSINESS.

About the Flower Trade, and the People Who Buy.

[Louisville Courier-Journal.]

"Business is very good, and it has been all the season. In fact, I don't believe there's a florist in the city who has had flowers enough to supply the demand."

The conversation was taking place in a Fourth avenue conservatory, and the speaker was the proprietor. He was deftly arranging a bouquet of fragrant roses and deep green smilax, which the nimble fingers of a young lady assistant was preparing.

"Nearly all the business we do now is in flowers to be worn. Gentlemen seldom buy for themselves—very different from what it was four or five years ago, when every man had a button hole bouquet. A man with flowers on his coat is now at once classed as a dude, though we have a few customers who buy every day. Ladies have changed places, and now they can't wear enough. The styles have changed, too. Flowers are all arranged loosely and carelessly, and with very little foliage, sometimes with none at all. One kind is almost exclusively worn, though formerly as many and as gaudy a collection as possible was considered the best taste. Artificial flowers are very rarely used. At the charity ball all the ladies except one wore natural flowers, and she would have done so, too, if a bouquet could have been purchased in the city. She felt badly about it, I assure you."

"What flowers are the most popular?"

"Roses and violets. Of the former the greatest favorites are Marechal Niels and Catherine Merwets. The demand for violets is always good, and we never have too many on hand. Smilax is also very popular, as we work it in with all other flowers. Carnations are used mostly for funeral orders. Lilies of the Valley are always salable, as they are used in bouquets with other blossoms. We have little demand for camellias. Bouquets are worth from $1 to $5 for roses and from 25 cents up for violets. You can get a very pretty little bunch of the latter for 10 to 25 cents."

"It may surprise you," he continued, "to know that most of the flowers sold here are shipped from the east and north. One firm on Fourth avenue buy all their supplies from the east. We buy in Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, Batavia, LaSalle and other places, though we make it a point to purchase as many as possible in this city."

In a further conversation the florist remarked that, while the profits were good, they were not in proportion to the risks of the trade. Rose buds which cost 6 to 8 cents are retailed at 10 cents and a bunch which costs 18 cents in Boston is retailed at 25 cents, and this with the risk of loss by wilting and freezing.

"Competition is very lively, and we have to adopt all legitimate plans for securing customers. I go to the theatre regularly, and attend all the fashionable entertainments and receptions. I do this partly to see how other florists arrange their flowers and partly to see who are the best customers. Every firm has its peculiar style, and I can tell who arranged a design as soon as I set eyes upon it. By this way I can determine with whom I have to compete and I learn to recognize a possible customer. If I see a young man three or four times at the theatre with young ladies, all of whom have bouquets, I take it for granted that he is worth having. The first order he may happen to send to me he will usually get very cheap.

"We don't resort to the tricks for attracting customers that they do in the east, however. Did you ever hear of 'crape pulling?' Well, it's a term the florists have. They keep spies on the lookout for crape on the door-knobs, and as soon as it makes its appearance a basket of flowers are sent to the bereaved family with the dealer's sympathy. This often procures an order, but I don't believe it would work here. In fact I don't know any family that wouldn't get offended at receiving a basket from a strange florist. There are lots of other tricks of trade, but 'crape pulling' is all that I'll tell you about now. The others will do to keep to ourselves.

"The business is very risky. We oftener buy blindly than any other class of business men, and there's never any telling when we'll get left with a lot of withered flowers on hand. We often prepare for funerals, and then not a single order is sent us, though the family in which the death occurs may have been old and regular customers."

The Walking-Stick.

[Atlanta Constitution.]

Chinese Gordon's habit of carrying a walking-stick instead of a sword in battle is not a habit confined to him alone. Many European officers always carry their walking sticks in the field. The modern walking-stick is of ancient and respectable origin. It is a modification and a union of the shepherd's crook, the palmer's staff, the traveler's stick, the wand of office, the scepter of monarchy and the sword. The slender stick now in use made its appearance in the court of the king of France, some 400 years ago. Different classes frequently carry different styles of canes. Thus the old cuts represent the physician with his thick knobbed and tasseled cane, the merchant with a stick shaped like a shepherd's crook, the ruffian with his short, thick bludgeon, etc. Oddity once exhausted itself on the shape of the stick but it now attacks the knob. Here everything in nature is imitated in gold, silver, brass, copper, ivory and wood.

The Florida Lemon.

[Atlanta Constitution.]

Mr. Charley Owens thinks a great deal of the Florida lemon. It has always been fine flavored, juicy and large, but its dull color has been against it. Skillful handling in the drying house gives the skin the bright yellow that attracts on the fruit stands, and the Florida lemon now commands a premium. Lemon trees bear sooner than the orange tree, and the profits are quite as large. Lemon groves are therefore being rapidly planted.

Wanted a Furlough.

[Chicago Herald.]

An ex-Confederate story teller says that during one of Lee's battles near Richmond he saw a comrade on his knees, with his hand held high above his head, crying out "Come along, furlough, come along." He wanted a finger taken off by a bullet so that he could go home. An officer came up behind him and gave him a violent kick. The soldier cried "If that ain't a discharge, I'll be hanged." He said afterward that he thought a piece of burst shell had struck him.

ADRIFT

[The Spectator.]

Drift, let it drift, the cords are snapped that curbed it,
The rigid anchor holds that bark no more;
The impatient sails whose fluttering so disturbed it
No longer flap beside the somber shore.
Out of the haven, 'thwart the roadstead gleaming,
Beyond the far, bright offing hath it passed,
Still of some golden goal a-dreaming, dreaming,
O'er the wide deep that light bark drifts at last.

Let it drift on, nor blast nor billow checking,
No whirlpool to ingulf, no rock to break,
The sea a mirror smooth for its bedecking,
The sky a blue pavilion for its sake.
On let it drift, the laughing mermaids weaving
Fantastic wings its devious course around,
And the gay sirens mocking its believing
With sweet, delusive ecstasies of sound.

Yet bright skies change; Hope's refluent tides run wildly,
And Fortune wreaks great wonders with her wand,
So, on some wintry eve, while I am idly
Counting the dusk waves on the somber strand,
Haply before me from the offing shaded,
A helmless bark shall drift in shattered state,
Its golden name, "The Mary," blurred and faded,
Tangle and bitter brine its only freight.

INSANITY AND CRIME.

The Idea of Inflicting Punishment on Men of Unsound Mind.

[Chicago Inter Ocean.]

The brain of Frank Rande, the inhuman monster who committed suicide in the penitentiary at Joliet the other day, ought to be subjected to the most careful and scientific investigation. There was something so very abnormal in his case that it is worth while to know, if possible, whether he was a freak of nature in her most diabolical mood or a lunatic. Thirteen murders were committed by him.

Rande was not a product of his surroundings. He belonged to a respectable family, remote from those centers of population which breed habitual criminals. He himself was once respected. At one time he a school teacher. The genius of Bulwer has given immortality to Eugene Aram, the school teacher who committed murder. Everybody feels that there is peculiar incongruity between teaching school and taking a human life. Had Eugene Aram been engaged in any other pursuit his case would have been less sensational and surprising. But in Frank Rande we have a school teacher sunk to the very bottom of the bottomless pit as an enemy of society. A tramp taking [illegible] satisfaction in human butchery. What was it? Did the snake in his nature lay coiled in torpor until [illegible] into the absolute master of his life, or did reason abdicate?

In either case Rande ought to have been hanged by the public executioner. We have a false sense of justice which revolts at the idea of executing or even punishing in any way a man of unsound mind. The theory of the law is that such are not responsible. In the final analysis that may be true, but the object of penalty in human law is to protect society, and upon any theory of such a case as that of Rande he could not live without imperiling the lives of those about him. A mad dog is not to blame for its rabies, and might be chained in a kennel, but even a Bergh would not object to his being put out of the world with all possible expedition. It is further to be remembered that the insane are often so far rational that the very leniency of the law toward their class operates upon their mind as a spur to evil. Many a crime has been committed by the insane under the conviction that insanity would be as it proved, an ægis for their protection. It is doing the public a great wrong to foster such a danger. But however one may feel on this point, there can be no regret over the fact that convict Rande has gone to his final account, his career of blood forever at an end.

Some Statistics of Divorce.

[Pall Mall Gazette.]

A French philosopher has been collecting the statistics of divorce and lecturing on the theories with which they supply him. The results are interesting and in some respects singular. Some well worn theories are quite upset by his facts and figures. Taking a fixed standard of 1,000 marriages, the philosopher distributes all countries into three groups—group A, where the divorces average from one to five in the 1,000, group B, where they run from six to ten, group C, where in 1,000 marriages there are from eleven to twenty eight divorces.

It is strange to find among the first class the Italians, the Russians and the Scotch. It seems the only point in common among nationalities otherwise so opposed. The Swedes, the Norwegians, the Dutch and the Hungarians are in the second class, while the third includes most other European people. The philosopher insists that the laws of a country have no influence on these results. Norway and Denmark have the same laws and Norway is moral and Denmark is loose. Switzerland is one republic, but in the canton of Lucerne there is scarcely ever a divorce and in Appenzell there are a great many. In Catholic countries, as a rule, there are few, and in Protestant there are many.

Much depends on profession. Artists and men of letters seem very unfortunate in their unions. Moreover, the statistics of suicide run parallel with those of divorce. Saxony is the country where both are found in greatest numbers. For a space of three years the number of suicides remained stationary in Sweden, and so did the divorces. Both are checked by the birth of children. The lecturer closed with a singular statistic. Where the husband is from 5 to 25 years older than his wife the number of divorces runs up to 184 in the 1,000, where he is more than 25 they drop to 1 per cent.

What Car-Drivers Say.

[Inter Ocean.]

A New York car-driver when he wants to clear the track shouts "hi, there, hi." A Chicago driver strikes his bell and shouts "shake 'em up there, will you." A Boston driver says, "deviate from the direct line those equine appendages, accelerate, accelerate, exhilaration, lively now."

Consumption of Gunpowder.

[Chicago Times.]

In the matter of powder-making Pennsylvania leads all the other states in the Union, with New York and Ohio competing for second place. Curiously enough, much more powder is burned in times of peace than in time of war. The average daily consumption of powder in the United States is 100 tons. In a battle in which 50,000 men fired forty rounds each less than one-quarter of an ordinary day's quota of powder would be used. In the construction of the Hoosac tunnel more powder was exploded than in the war of the rebellion, and a single large coal mine will use almost as much. The coal trade consumes more powder than any other single interest. A quantity is exported and the rest is used in civil engineering, in the manufacture of pyrotechnics, for sporting and military purposes, and by the government in firing signals and salutes.

THE SLUMS OF WALL STREET.

Energetic Raid To Be Made Upon the Bucket Shops.

[New York Sun.]

The New York Stock exchange seems to have made up its mind to suppress the bucket shops, which have so far survived all the attacks made upon them. By way of a preliminary measure a new arrangement is to be made for the use of the ticker, and the bucket shops are to be deprived of their present facilities of obtaining immediate Stock exchange quotations. There are people who argue that it is a mean piece of business on the part of so wealthy a corporation as the New York Stock exchange to attempt to suppress petty stock gambling, while its own only aim is to encourage big gambling.

Prima facie it seems that people arguing in that way are perfectly right. A citizen of a free country has as much right to speculate in ten shares as in a hundred or a thousand share lots. If stock gambling is immoral let it be stopped altogether, if it is not, the smallest bucket-shop has as much right to carry on business as the largest Wall street firm. Otherwise we shall come to the condition of affairs as exists in England, where, if a poor man throws dice or tosses a penny for drinks in a bar-room, everybody present, including the landlord, can be arrested, fined and sent to prison, while thousands of pounds sterling are nightly lost and won at the fashionable clubs.

This is one way to look at the question, but there is a reverse to the medal, which requires to be looked at to be appreciated. The basement of the building extending from 40 and 42 Broadway to 51 and 53 New street is full of bucket shops. Hundreds of shabby looking, haggard faced human beings are all day long gambling there in what is called "fractional lots" of stocks, grain, provisions, and everything else. The stench and filth of these places during business hours are indescribable. Negroes, old women, and children are selling sandwiches, pies, and rotten apples. The gamblers are all able to [illegible] looking men who ought to be capable of earning a decent living at legitimate business, but the [illegible] sitting there watching the blackboards as eagerly as the broken down gamblers out west watch [illegible]. Probably half of these [illegible] the proceeds of pawned watches [illegible]. It is a pity that [illegible] Matthew Arnold and Lord Coleridge [illegible] not taken to these places. They [illegible] probably have had something quite instructive to say on the subject of the influence of the bucket shop upon American civilization.

Lax-Poor Russian Emperor.

One may form some idea of the extent of the possessions belonging to the Russian emperor, as property attached to the crown, when we hear that the Altai estates alone cover an area of 40,000,000 dessiatines, or over 170,000 square miles, being about two times the size of England and Wales. The Nertchinsk estates, in eastern Siberia, are estimated at about 18,000,000 dessiatines. In the Altai estates are situated the gold and silver mines of Barnaul, Pavlo[illegible], Smeinogorsk? and Loktepp, the copper foundry at Sasounsk and the great iron works at Gavrilov, in the Salagirov district.

The receipts from these enormous estates are in a ridiculously pitiful ratio to their extent. In the year 1882 they amounted to 950,000 rubles, or a little more than £95,000; while for 1883 the revenue was estimated at less than half this sum, or about 400,000 rubles. The rents, etc., gave a surplus over expense of administration of about a million and a half of rubles. On the other hand the working of the mines showed a deficit of over a million; hence the result just indicated.

A partial explanation of this very unsatisfactory state of things is to be found in the situation of the mines, which are generally in places quite destitute of wood, while the smelting works were naturally situated in districts where wood abounds, sometimes as much as 600 or 700 kilometres distant from the mines. The cost of transport of raw materials be am considerable in this way. By degrees all the wood available in the neighborhood of the smelting-works became used up, and it was necessary to fetch wood from a distance of even over 100 kilometres. Formerly the mines were really penal settlements, worked by convicts, who were partly helped by immigrants whose sons were exempted from military service on the condition of working in the mines. But since the abolition of serfdom this system has been quite altered, and there is now a great deal of free labor on the ordinary conditions.

Joaquin Miller's Admiration.

[Chicago News Interview.]

Presently, noticing a number of faded photographs of women up on the shelves in the corner, we fell to talking about women and I found he had a veneration for them, as all good men have. One of his conceits was that he never enjoyed the performance of an actress unless on the stage unless he loved her momentarily, he must be in rapport with her, he must sympathize with her and he must love her as she passed before him on the stage, else he took no interest in the play.

And then he said: "I have never seen a pretty woman that I did not want to kiss her."

He professed to most admire brunettes. "My ideal woman is dark, for it is the dark woman who is full of passion. She has an olive skin and fierce black eyes, and glorious black hair. She must have a large mouth—oh, how I detest a small mouth, for it means selfishness and coldness and deceit! Give me a large mouth, with full, pouting, wine-red lips—a mouth to be kissed!"

"But is not a mouth beautiful if it have fine teeth?"

"No, not at all. A mouth is to be kissed. We do not kiss the teeth—we kiss the lips!"

The big pond snails of the tropics have been found alive in logs of mahogany imported from Honduras; and M. Cailland carried some from Egypt to Paris packed in sawdust. Indeed, it isn't easy to ascertain the limit of their endurance, for Mr Laidlay, having placed a number in a drawer for this very purpose, found them alive after five years' torpidity, although in the warm climate of Calcutta. In 1849 Mr. Pickering received from Mr. Wollaston a basketful of Madeira snails (of twenty or thirty different kinds), three-fourths of which proved to be alive, after several months' confinement, including a sea voyage. Mr. Wollaston has himself recorded the fact that specimens of two Madeira snails survived a fast and imprisonment in pill boxes of two years and a half duration, and that large numbers of a small species, brought to England at the same time, were all living, after being inclosed in a dry bag for a year and a half.

M. Lalou, the wealthy promoter and journalist who succeeded M. de Girardin in the direction of The France, gave a house-warming dinner to the entire literary, printing, and administrative staffs in the new edifice in which henceforth that journal is to come out. The architect's bill has amounted to 5,000,000 francs and 1,000 square metres of ground on which he erected the structure are said to be worth upwards of 600 francs per metre being situated behind the Bourse and having a frontage of 100 metres on the Rue Montmartre.

M. Lalou intends to make this journalistic palace a great center of financial and business activity. It is florid in Renaissance style, entered by a doorway as imposing as that of the Grand hotel, and flanked and surmounted by marble caryatides and allegorical figures of Printing and Criticism, executed by M. Lefevre. The building is surmounted by the Genius of France holding in outstretched hand a penny piece, the price of the journal throughout France. Beneath it in a niche is M. de Girardin's bust, and a story lower an urn symbolizing universal suffrage. There is a luxury of sculptured and painted furniture within and without, which is out of keeping with the coarse single sheet on which The France is printed.

On the ground floor there will be an immense hall, a permanent and daily renewed exhibition such as one sees at The Figaro office. This room is separated by a plate partition from the machinery room, in which three Marinonis work. The composing rooms are in the attic, and communicate telephonically with the editors' room. The editors can dictate to the printers through a man who wears a helmet like a diver. Nor should we forget the editorial mess room where lunches are served, or the vast fencing hall, in which they can exercise while the work of digestion is most active and learn how to defend opinions at the sword's as well as the pen's point.

Collapse of a New Motor.

[Washington Co.) Citizen.]

Old Dave Dove is an ancient colored citizen who has probably already scored his hundred years, [illegible] yet sprightly for his age. His business is to wait upon the store of Major Wilkins, by whom he is fed, clothed and cared for. By some means old Dave came into possession of a small yearling, which he determined to break to single harness. After much labor Dave constructed a truck wagon with [illegible] shafts. The next thing was the harness, which was a curious amalgamation of strings, old pieces of bagging and a husk collar ample enough for an elephant. It was altogether a work of labor as well as ingenuity, but patience and perseverance always conquer, and at last Dave was ready.

Slipping away out of sight, Dave harnessed up his yearling, a proud smile of triumph all the time wreathing the old man's dusky features. He led out his calf, which seemed so gentle that old Dave was tempted to get into the wagon, and right here Dave made a mistake. Firmly seated he shook up his lines and [illegible] the word to "palang." The calf turned his head for a moment and viewed his attendants with a contemptuous leer, and then with a kick and a bleat he started for the square. Old Dave was upset and rolled upon the ground, and the calf darted onward. Dave started to his feet and shouted for somebody to "stop dat verlin." It was no use. The wagon had come in contact with some obstruction and was an irreparable wreck, while calfy turned and looked on the ruin he had wrought with the complacency of a successful candidate in a county election.

A Pithy Sentence

A well known statesman of this country once said when summing up the events of a lifetime: "Youth is a blunder, manhood a struggle, old age a regret." He might have added many more wonders, but they are not necessary, for his aphorism expresses much. Yet it is a well known fact that the above could not be said of life were all classes aware what a great remedy PERUNA is, and what wondrous cures it has performed. For the ills of youth it is a wondrous specific. The worry and tear of manhood's struggle for existence enfeeble his system and he needs such a tonic, and when old age comes on with its feebleness and regrets for failures and mistakes, the great remedy, PERUNA, can still be used with good effect, and if given a fair trial will accomplish wonders.

Gents—I have been a great sufferer till within a few months, for ten years with that worst of all diseases—rheumatism. At times I have been wholly unable to attend to my business, and for eight weeks was confined to my chair, my only relief from pain being while some one of my family rubbed my limbs. At the same time was covered with scrofula. I had tried every treatment and every kind of medicine recommended, to no purpose and was completely discouraged. Having heard a friend praise rheumatic syrup, as a last resort, I procured a bottle, but with little hope of receiving benefit. After taking two bottles, to my surprise, and need I say delight, I experienced a decided relief. Continuing its use, after taking four bottles, I find myself perfectly cured, and to-day am as well as ever in my life. Of the sores which covered my body, only the scars remain to testify of the efficiency of Rheumatic Syrup. As a blood purifier and a rheumatic cure, it has no equal. DEXTER HOGAN.

Wonders Never Cease

A long time ago the wise man said there is nothing new under the sun: but yet the daily experience of hundreds seem to prove this false. Some contend that the days of miracles are past, but yet it appears as if they are not yet gone by when such men as I. N. Tidball, of Washington, Pa., give the following remarkable testimony:

"I have been a severe sufferer from chronic rheumatism and kidney affection for over twenty years and after having tried nearly everything without getting relief commenced using PERUNA a few months ago. The benefit I have received is wonderful. I feel like a new man and am fully restored to health."

Surely such a cure is remarkable, and none should hesitate any longer about using PERUNA, the great remedy discovered by Dr. Hartman. Send to your druggist for a bottle, and ask for his book on the "Ills of Life."

Thousands Hastened to Their Graves!

Relying on testimonials written in vivid glowing language of some miraculous cures made by some largely puffed up doctor or patent medicine has hastened thousands to their graves, believing in their almost insane faith that the same miracles will be performed on them and that these testimonials make the cures, while the so called medicine is all the time hastening them to their graves. We have avoided publishing testimonials, as they do not make the cures, although we have

CALL FOR THE REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

The Republican State Convention will be held at Harrisburg, on Wednesday, April 16th, 1884, at [illegible] o'clock, for the purpose of selecting delegates-at-large to the National Republican Convention, nominating Presidential Electors, a candidate for Congressman-at-Large, and the transaction of such other business as may be presented.

The attention of County organizations is called to the following, adopted at the last meeting of the State Committee:

Resolved, That the State Convention to be held at Harrisburg, April 16, elect the delegates-at-large and those representing the congressional districts [illegible] and select candidates for presidential electors. That the several county [illegible] requested to provide for the [illegible] to the National convention in accordance with the rule adopted by the National Committee.

The following are the rules adopted by the National Committee:

By order of the Republican State Committee.

FOR DELEGATE-AT-LARGE.

The name of Hon. Lewis Emery, Jr., of this county will be presented to the state convention as a candidate for Delegate at Large to the Republican National Convention.

The Wellsboro Agitator says it has excellent authority for saying that State Senator Emery will not be a candidate for representative in congress from this district this year. "The recent reports from Washington to that effect were without foundation."

At the republican primary election in Tioga county out of a total of 1621 votes 1457 were cast for James G. Blaine for president. Senator Mitchell received 1461 votes for delegate at large to the national convention, and F. G. Schieffelin 1544 for district delegate. G. W. Merrick and S. F. Wilson were elected delegates to the state convention.

Capt. C. W. Mackey is a candidate for congress in the Erie, Warren and Venango district. We trust it will not be considered impertinent for an outsider to suggest that this would be a good year for that district to return to the practice of sending men of more than ordinary ability to the national legislature. There was a time when no district in the state was more creditably represented than the one which embraced the counties of Erie and Warren. The late Hon. C. B. Curtis and Judge G. W. Scofield were the representatives in those days. If we are not mistaken Capt. Mackey would come as near filling their seats so long vacant as any man in the district.

At the Blaine meeting which was held in Harrisburg on the 27th of March Col. Francis Jordan was the principal speaker. As usual he made a ringing speech in which he reviewed the record of the democratic party and called for the perpetuation of republican principles by the election of James G. Blaine. He said that nine of every ten republicans of Pennsylvania are for Blaine, and that he will receive the vote of the state at Chicago. He paid a high compliment to Edmunds, Lincoln, Hawley and Logan, especially commending the latter for his opposition to the Fitz-John Porter bill. The speaker's declaration that Porter should have been led out and shot provoked loud cheers. Col. Jordan is an old soldier, a Grand Army man and a patriot. He knows, and in his speech reflected the sentiments of ninety-nine hundredths of the old soldiers of this country on the Fitz John Porter business.

IRRECONCILABLE.

How the free trade and protection wings of the democratic party can be reconciled and agree upon a common basis of action is just now a difficult question to decide. The free traders are very largely in the majority not only in congress but throughout the country, and they are not willing to concede very much to the minority wing of the party. Henry Watterson says that unless the protection democrats will accept the Morrison bill it is time they picked up their grip sacks and walked over into the republican ranks. This position is endorsed by Speaker Carlisle, his colleague Blackburn and the balance of the Kentucky delegation, by Morrison and his democratic colleagues in the Illinois delegation, by Sunset Cox, Governor Dorsheimer, Hewitt and Hutchins of New York, by McDonald and Holman of Indiana and by two-thirds of the democratic members of congress from the entire country. Ex-Governor English of Connecticut predicts that the Morrison bill will pass the house and be defeated in the senate. Then will come the fight over the issues upon which the Carlisle-Randall speakership contest was decided. "The tariff," says Governor English, "is of no earthly use to Connecticut or to any one of the New England states. Our manufacturers would be no worse off, even if the policy of the country should be one of free trade." John Kelley says, "The moment you begin to temporize and trade and show the white feather and weaken along the line, your adversary will crowd ahead in front and smite you on the flank. The Morrison bill, sustained boldly and passed, would have brought the party before the country in the next campaign on a live issue, moderate, progressive, and clearly defined. A defeat of the bill by the senate would have brought the issue into much sharper relief." The Charleston News and Courier says, "Our own view is that democracy and protective doctrines are incompatible and that the man who is a sincere and genuine protectionist cannot be a genuine and sincere democrat." The Philadelphia Record, the fearless and outspoken organ of Pennsylvania free traders, in speaking of the Morrison bill says:

The worst enemies of this bill, the democratic protectionists in congress, insist that the tariff should not be revised now, when there is wide spread depression in manufacturing industry, and when labor is suffering from reductions of wages and want of employment. They made the same objection four years ago, but on the ground that the wonderful prosperity caused by the tariff should not be recklessly disturbed. The plain truth is that they are opposed to any reduction of the tariff [illegible] whether trade be flourishing or whether it be depressed, and they always have a ready excuse. Like the Arkansas traveler who could not shingle his house when it rained and had no need to shingle it when the weather was dry, the democratic protectionists can never find a convenient time for this important work. But, to do them justice, they are always willing to pass a resolution on the subject. They cannot support this bill, but they have no objection to general declarations and adopt the "Ohio resolution," or any other double barreled resolution that may promote an indefinite postponement of a troublesome question. Yet they will not recognize the fact that the time for platform generalities on the tariff is ended in the democratic party, and that nothing remains now but to come down to business.

On the other hand the Hartford Times, the leading democratic paper of Connecticut says, "No party can live which stands on the doctrine of free trade, for the benefit of English manufacturers of steel, woolen, cotton and other goods against the interests of our own mills, workshops and mechanics. And the sooner we (and especially such would be leaders as Mr. Henry Watterson) know it, the better." The Philadelphia Times, the organ of the protection democrats of Pennsylvania, in its issue of March 22d, in speaking of the Morrison bill says:

It is an affront to the intelligence of congress and of the country to force such a tariff abortion as the Morrison bill upon the democratic party. Morrison despises it because it is not wholly free trade, but he has taken it as a wedge to make an opening for free trade, and he whittles his wedge from day to day to adapt it to the democratic logs to be split. He has no more hope of passing his bill and making it a law than he has of making Watterson the next pope of Rome, and he no more wants to make it a law than he wants to go home from Washington [illegible] with a congressional committee [illegible], but he wants free trade, and proposes to tempt or force the democrats over the fence, or on top of the fence, to get them so far committed to free trade.

No amendment of mere details can make the Morrison tariff acceptable either to himself or to those who differ from him in theory, and to temporize by amendment and pass the bill in the house would be a cowardly surrender of both sides and a mockery of statesmanship. The Morrison bill should be defeated because both Morrison and Randall, Carlisle and Eaton, Cox and Converse and all men of all sides confess it to be a deception, and all who despise the free trade delusion must know it to be a snare. Defeat the Morrison tariff abortion.

Col. McClure is firm in the belief that the men who are engineering the Morrison bill would rather see their party defeated next November than fail in accomplishing their purpose. In an interview with a New York Herald correspondent he is reported to have said, "I ran over to Washington and met at dinner Mr. Morrison, Mr. Carlisle, Senator McDonald and Mr. Watterson. Two vivid impressions were made upon my mind. First, the radical departure, with the inevitable consequences of defeat of the party in November next, made by these gentlemen, and second, the honest courage with which they stand by their convictions, which they support, with every evidence of most conscientious belief. They expect to go before the country with this English policy of free trade. They do not believe in incidental or accidental protection, but go the whole figure and expect to lose this campaign in consequence of it. I said to them, 'This course, this policy will lose you the election,' and they all said, 'Yes,' except Mr. McDonald, who appeared to think that there might be a chance of carrying it."

RANDALL is up to his old tricks of forcing through appropriation bills which will not begin to pay the expenses of the departments, knowing that these expenses must be made up by deficiency bills in the next congress. This is the species of economy which this demagogue has been practicing for years, and which some republican papers are in the habit of commending. It is the quintessence of buncombe.

MR. BLAINE'S RELIGION.

Considerable discussion as to Mr. Blaine's religious belief has occupied the attention of the press of the country for years past, and especially whenever his name has been mentioned in connection with the presidency. Individually, we would not inquire into a man's religious convictions in supporting him for a political office. If his moral character was what it should be, and his political sentiments corresponded with our belief we would earnestly and heartily support him whether a Protestant or a Catholic. The republican party is not nor has it ever been a party of religious proscription. It favors the principle of every man worshipping God according to the dictates of his conscience. But Mr. Blaine was raised under peculiar circumstances. His father was a Protestant and his mother a devout Catholic. For the past twenty years he has been a member and communicant of the Congregational church in Augusta, Maine. General J. B. Sweitzer, prothonotary of the United States district court of Pittsburg, was born and raised a close neighbor of the Blaine's at Brownsville, Washington county, in this state. To a reporter of the Philadelphia Press he recently gave the following information in reference to the religion of the Blaine family.

James G. Blaine is not a Catholic. It is true that the most of his family were of the Roman belief, but let me tell you how it came that he is and always was a Protestant. All of the Blaine's, that is to say, the father and paternal grandfather, were Protestants. Ephraim Blaine, the father of James G., married a Miss Gillespie, daughter of [illegible] Gillespie, a well known and wealthy gentleman of Washington county. The Gillespie family were all Catholics, and after her marriage Miss Gillespie adhered as closely as ever to her religion. Ephraim Blaine and his wife lived happily, notwithstanding these religious differences. It was naturally agreed that she should raise her daughters in the Catholic faith, while Mr. Blaine would educate his boys as Protestants, and that was the way it was done. Mrs. Walker, the lady who ordered that monument you speak about, is a Catholic, as was Blaine's other sister. A short time before Ephraim Blaine died he became a Catholic and was buried in the Catholic graveyard at Brownsville.

Four or five years ago Mrs. Ephraim Blaine died while in the West with her daughter. She was buried there with Catholic ceremonies. Soon Mrs. Blaine's body was brought quietly to Brownsville and interred beside that of her deceased husband. I accompanied the senator on a visit to the graves only a few days ago, since which time a small monument has been erected over the mounds.

WE ARE requested to announce the fact that A. F. Bannon, of Kendall borough, will be a candidate before the republican convention for the nomination for sheriff. Mr. Bannon is at present chairman of the county committee. He is one of the working republicans of the county, and it is claimed by his friends would make a very strong candidate. He has been a resident of the county for a number of years and has served as coroner one term. Should "Tony" reach the sheriff's office, there is no doubt the difficult duties belonging to that officer would be promptly and faithfully attended to.

THE CUSTOM has become prevalent throughout the country for candidates to announce their candidacy in some county paper before the convening of the convention in which they look for nomination. In some counties the candidates are required to do so. The propriety of announcing cannot be questioned. It gives the voters an opportunity of ascertaining the strength and availability of the several candidates who are asking their suffrages. When the delegates come to the convention they are very apt to know who would be the most acceptable as candidates in their neighborhood, and vote accordingly. Our attention has been called to this subject by reading the call of the Tioga republican county committee which has lately been published in the Agitator. In that call we find the following resolutions which were originally adopted some years ago:

Resolved, That hereafter all the names of candidates for any county or district office shall be announced in the entire edition of a public newspaper published in the county at least ten days before the day appointed for holding the primary election, and that votes cast for any candidate for such an office who has not been so announced shall not be counted by the county convention in determining the candidates nominated.

Resolved, That the county committee be instructed to publish the above resolution each year among the other rules governing the primary elections and county conventions.

Blaine can beat anybody because no other candidate is so strong in the Pacific states. No slander, like the Morey letter can rob him, as Garfield was robbed, of California and Nevada, which are absolutely essential if New York should fail. Neither fraud or slander can successfully assail Blaine. Enthusiasm will run over every obstacle and trick. A grand life record, against which these things have always been vainly aimed, cannot be injured when love and interest conspire for their rejection.

The foregoing extract, which appeared in Col. Cooper's article was received in a letter from Mr. Rogers, the proprietor of this paper, from Leadville, Col., a few days since. In his letter Mr. Rogers says, "Col. Cooper is clearly correct in his estimate of Blaine's strength on the Pacific coast. During my visit to California last fall I conversed with a great many men on the subject of the presidency, and the universal desire among republicans was that Blaine should be nominated. Every man without an exception, contended that he would receive the electoral votes of California, Oregon and Nevada without an effort. On my way east I fell in with the Lieut. Gov. of Nevada, (I do not recall his name) who was elected by a decisive majority as a republican on the day the present democratic governor was elected. This gentleman assured me that if Mr. Blaine should be the republican nominee for president he was just as certain of receiving the electoral vote of Nevada as that of Iowa. The same Blaine sentiment seems to prevail in Colorado. I have not conversed with a republican here, outside of federal officeholders, who do not concede that Mr. Blaine would be the strongest with the republican people. Among the soldiers Gen. Logan has many warm friends which he is deserving of, but there is no denying the fact that with the great mass of the party Mr. Blaine is overwhelmingly the choice."

PROSCRIPTION.

There is no section of the United States where the principle of protection would prove more advantageous to all classes of people than in the old slave states, and notably in the states of Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee and Virginia. The immense deposits of iron and coal which underlie large sections of their territory are being utilized, mills are being established for the conversion of their cotton into cloths, and industrial enterprises of every character are springing into existence in their principal towns. The bulk of these enterprises are in their infancy, and they require the fostering care of the government, in order that they may become firmly established and able to compete with the importations of foreign countries. Some of the leading papers of those states are now firm supporters of the tariff, and they insist that if the free traders in congress succeed in cutting down the present duties, they will damage their section of country to a greater extent than any other. Among these papers is the American, of Nashville, Tenn. A few days ago the chairman of the democratic state committee of that state applied for an injunction, through one of the courts, which was granted, enjoining the editors of the American from advocating a protective tariff or from publishing anything not in harmony with the platform of the democratic party. This is only a fair sample of the proscriptive policy which has been the governing principle with the dominant party in the south since the close of the rebellion. It will not brook any interference even with its ideas of political economy. The courts usually obey its behests, but when the courts fail to respond satisfactorily then the shotgun method is resorted to. But the time is coming and it is not far distant, when these chickens will come home to roost. There are a good many papers in the south of the ability and standing of the Nashville American, which favor protection and the advanced political sentiments of the day, and which despise bulldozing in all its forms. These papers have behind them a public sentiment which from day to day is increasing in power and represents the better element of the people. This sentiment will soon be strong enough to break up the "solid south," which is made so by the shotgun democracy.

THE democratic state convention assembled at Allentown on Wednesday. The programme of action had been so well arranged by the leaders that there was apparently the utmost harmony. There was no open opposition to Randall, and the Wallace men claim that they gained more than they expected thus both factions are happy. Gen. W. H. H. Davis, of Doylestown, who has been defeated twice before the people, was given the empty nomination for congressman at large. Mort Elliott positively refused to take the forlorn chance of a renomination, and the nomination went begging. R. P. Allen and F. L. Keenan were selected as delegates to the national convention from this district. Wm. F. Harrity, of Philadelphia, Wm. A. Wallace, of Clearfield, James P. Barr of Allegheny, Eckley B. Coxe, of Luzerne, B. F. Meyers of Dauphin, Wm. H. Snowden of Lehigh, were chosen delegates at large to the national convention. Hon. Richard Vaux, of Philadelphia, B. J. McGrann, of Lancaster, H. B. Plumer of Venango were nominated for electors at large.

JOHN B. CHAPMAN, of Bradford city, authorizes us to announce his name as a candidate for the republican nomination for district attorney. Mr. Chapman is one of the most active and industrious of the younger members of the bar. He is a McKean county attorney, having studied his profession and been first admitted to practice at this bar. He has a laudable ambition to attain an honorable position in his profession, and should he be nominated and elected we do not doubt that he would use all of his energies and ability with the determination to make a good record as district attorney. Politically he is well brought up, and is therefore a good republican.

HON. L. F. WATSON, of Warren county, is urged by the republicans of the northwestern counties as a candidate for congressman at large. He has served with distinction two terms in congress as a representative from the Erie district, and has made such a record that his nomination would be looked upon as eminently safe, and would be enthusiastically endorsed by the voters of Western Pennsylvania.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

THERE can, in the future be no difference in the understanding and aims of the readjusters and republicans of Virginia, who have, by the dangers and toils which they have shared together in the past, cemented the bonds of a political friendship which is destined to be lasting.—Richmond Whig.

WE have a country of our own whose interests we must look to before we look to the interests and follow the wishes of Great Britain. No party can live which stands on the doctrine of free trade, for the benefit of English manufacturers of steel, woolen, cotton and other goods, and mechanics. And the sooner we (and especially such would be leaders as Mr. Henry Watterson) know it the better.—Hartford Times, (dem.)

"ABLE republican editors"—says the sarcastic and frank democratic Atlanta Constitution—"of a humorous turn are now having their quadrennial picnic at the expense of the unfortunate democratic party, which is being kicked, and mauled and plucked in the house of its friends." This is not a cheerful spring note from the sunny south land, but it has the ring which sad sincerity alone can give.—Lancaster Examiner.

MAHONE'S organ, the Richmond (Va.) Whig, comes out very plainly on the tariff question and says: "So far as manufacturing interests are concerned, the state of Virginia to-day has changed places with Massachusetts. A high protective tariff would be of greater material benefit to Virginia in her iron, coal and mineral interests generally, and in her wooden manufactures, and in the manufacture of all textile fabrics, than such a tariff would be to the New England States. Free trade would be a fraud on this state."

THE editors of democratic country newspapers in Pennsylvania have good hearts. If you go trout fishing with one of them, and get into the deep woods, he will confide to you that he is against a protective tariff, and that he never did believe congress had a right to lay taxes except for the purpose of paying the expense of government. But the moment he leaves the woods he no longer thinks it is safe to meddle with the tariff. He will howl for reform in a general way, but it is only under cover that he will go into particulars. This cowardice in the leaders of opinion keeps the democratic party in Pennsylvania undermost.—Philadelphia Record.

OUR own view is that democracy and protective doctrines are incompatible, and that the man who is a sincere and genuine protectionist cannot be a genuine and sincere democrat, an advocate of popular rights and personal freedom. We are willing to make the Morrison bill a party question, and measure the democracy of every congressman by that standard. But it is not practicable, perhaps, to go as far as this. If it is not, the friends of the bill should, at least, insist that the democratic congressmen shall exercise their power so as to bring up the bill for discussion. This will put the renegades and dodgers on the record, when the vote comes, and stamp them indelibly as the opponents of progress and the enemies of prosperity.—Charleston News and Courier. (Dem.)

THE fact that Mr. Blaine's friends are moving in several of the states and electing delegates to Chicago does not signify that Mr. Blaine himself has a personal anxiety for the presidency and is going to push for the place. He realizes all the difficulties of all the animosities in his way as fully as any one can, but it does not follow, as he is not shouldering for the presidency for himself, that he should submit his friends naked to his enemies. He has not refused the use of his name as a rallying point for them. This is equivalent to saying that he and those who are with him expect to have something to say in the republican convention. This is not unnatural, as the majority of the delegates from republican districts have been for Blaine in two national conventions. They think that they should have about as much interest in determining a republican nomination as the solid south, whose votes in the convention can have no backing in the electoral colleges.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette (Rep.)

THE democratic party used to be the party of the poor man. Its name indicates that it was the purpose of its founders to give fair play to the mass, to encourage the unfortunate and give strength to the helpless. With such purposes in view it won success for many years. Having the courage of its convictions and the aggressiveness which belongs to courage, it won the respect of the people. But there is no such democratic party now. The party having that name is made up of raiders that tremble and turn their tails to their own shadows. There is a surplus revenue which invites men of even good tendencies to be thieves; but the democratic party dare not say that there shall be a reduction in the excessive taxation which produces it. Congressman Dorsheimer remarked in substance the other day that if the so-called tariff reform democratic party was a mere second edition of the republican organization it had better disband. It certainly had. There is no party for the mass as the situation is now. There are parties merely for the rich and the few. Let the democracy put up mummies for the two chief offices and go into the campaign on a protective platform. If the party has not the courage of its convictions, let it at least have the courage of its hypocrisy. If it dare not say what it believes it is its duty to say, let it openly advertise its faith in the all sufficient barrel and its loss of faith in everything else.—N. Y. Graphic.

Grant and Logan.

The report that General Grant encourages any movement on his behalf for the presidential nomination has no elements of probability. The great distinguishing trait of General Grant's illustrious career is his rare saving good sense—a good sense which shines above the occasional mistakes to which all men are liable—and he knows that the time for such a movement has gone by. The country cherishes a deep and undying respect for the great soldier who led its armies to victory and who filled the presidential chair for two terms, and, though in private station, he holds the highest post of honor in remaining the foremost citizen of the republic.

General Grant has himself furnished the most conclusive answer to the rumor in declaring himself for the nomination of General Logan. This expression is creditable to his chivalric spirit and his honorable personal fidelity. It is known that General Grant regards General Logan as the ablest, the most deserving and most successful volunteer general of the war. Those who are familiar with his views understand him as believing that in several critical emergencies General Logan's judgment and patriotic spirit were of inestimable public service. The country remembers how much impatience—and undeserved impatience—there was at one time with General Thomas before he struck his great blows in Tennessee. General Logan was sent with power to relieve him and assume the command. When he arrived on the scene of action he made his own observation, saw that Thomas was right, quietly withheld himself and never took the command and its great opportunity which was within his reach. How many men with the commission in their pockets would have shown such a degree of self abnegation?

It is not surprising that Grant who knows Logan's work and worth in the great struggle should favor his nomination for the presidency. The expression is honorable to both, and it will not be without its effect in the canvas.—Phila. Press.

Wall Paper and Shades.

This is the time of the year when the neat housewife contemplates cleaning up the house and making it bright and tidy for the summer season. The most important item now in view is new wall paper and curtains, for the old is getting stained, discolored and shabby. The styles now are very tasty and cheap, and Messrs. Specht & Samo have just received a large assortment of the latest patterns of both wall paper and window shades, and will be pleased to show them to any one who would like something real neat and not too expensive. 10t3

For Easter.

Easter will soon be here, when every lady expects to be prepared to come out with a new spring hat. In order that none may be disappointed, Miss Carson has secured from the city the latest patterns of frames with the newest styles of trimmings, and is fully prepared to comply with the varied tastes of her numerous customers. Ladies contemplating anything new in the way of millinery goods will do well to call at her store—opposite the court house, next door to Young's store—before the prettiest shapes have been taken.

County Superintendent.

TO THE SCHOOL DIRECTORS OF M'KEAN County—Gentlemen: In pursuance of the forty-third section of the Act of 8th May, 1854, you are hereby notified to meet in convention, at the Court House, in Smethport, on the FIRST TUESDAY IN MAY, A. D. 1884, being the sixth day of the month, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, and select, viva voce, by a majority of the whole number of directors present, one person of literary and scientific acquirements, and of skill and experience in the art of teaching, as County Superintendent, for the three succeeding years; and certify the result to the state superintendent, at Harrisburg, as required by the thirty-ninth and fortieth sections of said Act.

M. O. CAMPBELL,
County Supt. of McKean Co.

The Olean Gazette says potatoes are being gathered up in that section for shipment at twenty cents per bushel

With one exception the jurors in the Clark murder trial at Little Valley were farmers the exception being a grocer

The man so stingy as to borrow a newspaper when he is able to buy, will talk through his nose to save wearing out his teeth

It is said that more butter and cheese is bought and shipped from Cattaraugus station than any other village in Western New York

[illegible] King will commence to-day the temporary removal of his billiard tables and the laying of a hard wood floor for the purpose of converting the room into a roller skating rink

Conductor Stuby has not yet decided to have the cataract removed from his eye. The eminent eye surgeons whom he has consulted differ as to the necessity and advisability of its removal

The partially burned residence of Dr. Sharp has been purchased by Col. Lyman and will be moved off and rebuilt. As soon as the ground is cleared the doctor will commence his new residence

We have just been informed that outside capitalists are contemplating the erection of a roller skating rink in this borough 100 feet long and 60 feet wide. We stop the press to give this important rumor

During the absence of Prothonotary Brawley as delegate at the democratic state convention Hugh [illegible] acts as clerk of the court for the [illegible] of argument court. It is well for the boy to have a little practice.

A junior drum corps has been organized in this borough consisting of twelve boys, six fifers and six drummers. The boys are practicing nearly every night under a competent instructor and promise soon to become very efficient

It is rumored that the lower floor of the new photograph building is also to be fitted up as a roller skating rink. The borough seems likely to be well supplied with means of that form of amusement. We have not yet learned that any of the churches are to be dismantled for that purpose

Newspapers in towns along the Allegheny river notice the rapid decrease in the number of rafts of lumber which are sent down the river and give as the reason that the railways can carry the lumber to market as cheaply as it can be rafted. The forests are also disappearing rapidly in Northwestern Pennsylvania

Reg. Bright, of the Democrat, suffered from a slight stroke of paralysis one day last week, affecting the whole of one side of his body. It was at first feared that it might prove a serious and permanent disability but we are pleased to see him on the street again this week and to learn that he is almost fully recovered

It is understood that Trinity Commandery, of Bradford, will attend the meeting of the Grand Commandery at [illegible] in May. In the last week in May Trinity will receive as guests the Commandery of Norristown, and on the 29th prox. Mary Commandery, No. 36, of Philadelphia, and also the Grand officers of the state

Prof. Yeats received a letter from England yesterday announcing the sad news of the death of his mother. She was 81 years old and suffered from a stroke of paralysis last fall from which she never fully recovered. It had been the intention of Prof. Yeats to go to England at the close of the present term of school to visit her

At a meeting of McKean Post 347 last evening it was resolved that suitable arrangements be made for a commemoration of Decoration Day. With that purpose in view a committee was appointed to arrange a programme of exercises and make other arrangements for the annual remembrance of the soldier dead. The members of the committee are A. H. Pearce, S. D. Freeman, P. Sartwell, Wm. H. Grumbline and D. A. Easterbrook

W. S. Oviatt, Esq., whose death we noticed last week was born in Herkimer county, N. Y., in 1807. He was married in 18[illegible] in Allegany county, N. Y., to Miss Rhoda Hall. He came to this county in 1830. In 18[illegible] he joined the Baptist church of this borough and was a constant and faithful member of that branch of the christian church to the day of his death, serving as clerk of the society over forty years. He was commissioners clerk a number of years, and held the office of justice of the peace over twenty five years. In 1859 he published the [illegible] one of the first newspapers published in the county

It was stated in a Buffalo paper on Saturday that the Bradford Sunday News and Mail were to be consolidated, and the first edition of the Mail of the following day announced the proposed change in a double leaded editorial. In the News and the later editions of the Mail the announcement was "conspicuous by its absence." We understand that the real cause of the failure to effect the consolidation was the prompt action of a prominent citizen who has considerable money invested in the News in putting his heavy foot on the scheme as soon as he heard of it. Thus the Bradford Sunday papers will continue to wage a desultory and futile competition with outside Sunday papers in two [illegible] instead of one compact body

The poormasters of Ceres township were in town last evening after the necessary documents authorizing the removal of one James Dunn of that township to the Warren insane asylum. Ceres has more than its share of paupers and town charges. Aside from the one mentioned the taxpayers of that township are caring for 14 paupers, including one blind and one deaf and dumb. The poormasters say the paupers as a rule are very much opposed to the county poorhouse system, and some of them will probably get mad and conclude to earn their own living or emigrate rather than go to the county poorhouse. It is not so fashionable as it is to live as a star boarder on the township.

Methodist Episcopal Church.

Next Sunday being Easter, a sermon appropriate to the occasion will be delivered in the morning, and a sermon to young men at 7 30 in the evening.

Easter at St. Luke's.

The order of services will be as follows: First, celebration of Holy Communion at 6 a m. Children's service and carols at 10 a m. Second, celebration of Holy Communion at 10 30 a m., evening service at 7 30 p m. The choir will render a fine selection of music in the services morning and evening

Great Oil Production.

In 1874 the Miner published a paper read before the Bradford Literary Society, entitled "The Resources of Bradford Township." Embodied in the paper was the following paragraph which sounds rather curiously at this day

Our oil production for the last year has extended 31 barrels daily at an average price of $1.50, making our oil product during the past year of panic and lowest price for oil $10,000. Next year the same quantity can be sold in advance now for $20,000, and it will be safe to contract $10,000 worth of drilling were prosecuted no further than at present

Musical Institute.

Prof. F. G. Spencer, of New York, a musical director of large experience, has organized a class in this borough for musical instruction and practice. The professor has been engaged in conducting musical institutes in surrounding towns and is preceded by a very high reputation. All of our musical inclined young people and citizens have become interested in the institute and joined the class, and will take part in a grand concert to be given next Friday evening, the 18th inst. Classes will be held for instruction and practice every evening until that time except Saturday at the Baptist church

Will go to Chicago.

We heartily congratulate our genial townsman E. L. Keenan, upon his selection to represent the democrats of this congressional district as one of the two delegates to the democratic national convention at Chicago. There is no much pecuniary profit in the position, but there is some honor (from a democratic point of view), and the prospect of a heap of fun. If he was to assist in the selection of a candidate who would or could be elected it would seem more like earnest business but then it is not every man who can be a delegate to even a democratic national convention, and it does us proud to have a Smethport man get there.

The Amphions.

The Amphion Concert Company will give one of their excellent entertainments at the opera house Saturday (tomorrow) evening. The Auburn News says of a recent appearance of the company in that city

The Amphion Concert Company appeared in a matinee performance, at the academy, this afternoon before a very large audience and in a remarkable programme. The Tenney family are the leading members of the company and they take rank easily with the McGibeny Family. The performances on brass instruments, by the children, particularly Master Frank's playing on the gigantic tuba are truly wonderful, while the sweet songs of Miss May and the cute sayings and precocious character and singing of little Johnnie are most pleasing. The Nixon sisters furnish exquisite vocal solos and duets, Miss Maggie Dunn's readings and sketches in mimicry are finely done and Charles W. Davis, the blind pianist, is almost phenomenal in his performances

Their Spokesman Speaks.

The editor of the Philadelphia Times has been writing for information to the small democratic bosses in the various counties of this commonwealth. He wanted to know what is the democratic mind of the state upon the question of a presidential candidate and the tariff, and therefore applied to the chairmen of the county committees, who are supposed to hold the custody of the said alleged mind, within their jurisdiction. Nearly all responded, and among them our friend E. L. Keenan. He says that the McKean county democrats are for Randall as first, Tilden ("dead from his eyes down") as second, and Hancock (the man who wrote foolish letters on the tariff question, but will "know more next time,") as third choice for president. As to the tariff question he says "they generally favor tariff with incidental protection, in preference to tariff for revenue only." There we have it in a nutshell, and our democratic friends are reliably informed as to what their tariff views are to be this year. Last year they were for "tariff for revenue," this year it is something else, and it is well to have some one to tell them just what it is to be, whether they understand the meaning of the ambiguous phrase or not.

Our City Fathers.

The newly elected borough council met at the office of J. C. Backus on the third of last month, were sworn in and organized for the work of the year. The oath of office was administered to the burgess, J. C. Backus, by Judge Olmsted, who in turn qualified the councilmen elect by the administration of the regulation iron clad oath

The members of council and their terms of service are as follows

A. D. Burbank, Chas. Sherer, } Three years.

A. L. Armstrong, John Brennan, } Two years.

W. D. Gallup, Wm. Hamer, } One year.

Francis Moses having been elected assistant burgess without any authority therefor, he was appointed by the board to that office and sworn in

The first regular meeting for business was held at the office of the burgess on Monday evening last, and the following resolutions offered and carried

Resolved, That A. D. Burbank be and is hereby elected [illegible] of the borough for the ensuing year, and that bail be fixed at $[illegible]

Resolved, That Chas. Sherer be and is hereby elected street commissioner for the ensuing year

Resolved, That H. L. Burlingame be and is hereby elected high constable for the ensuing year

Resolved, That Daniel O'Keefe be and is hereby elected pound master for the ensuing year

Resolved, That the burgess appoint a committee on streets consisting of three members of the council whose duty it shall be to personally examine the condition of the streets, sidewalks, sluices, etc., and make reports of their condition.

The burgess appointed as committee on streets Councilmen Brennan, Burbank and Armstrong.

A petition of sundry citizens praying that Green street be opened from Mechanic street to Pine street was read and placed on file, and it was

Resolved, That Green street from Mechanic street to Pine street be and the same is hereby ordered opened for the public use.

The Ancient Copperhead.

It is as impossible for a certain class of old time democratic editors to conceal their hatred of the boys in blue as it is for a rattlesnake to withhold its venom. Twenty years ago these skulking traitors in the rear were snarling at the heels of the government, rejoicing at heart over rebel victories, and despondent only when the union forces were victorious. The species is at this day nearly extinct, and it is only here and there that a specimen can be seen. He is as venomous at heart as ever, though usually remaining in a torpid state. He even assumes now to be the most loyal of the loyal and to entertain a deep and tender regard for the dead and living heroes who fought the battles of the union and saved the nation from dissolution. But his old hatreds are too deep seated and strong to be continually kept down and it needs but a slight provocation to stir up the torpid creature and provoke the old familiar hiss. As an instance, the G. A. R. Post of Eldred, in this county, took the liberty of expressing their sentiments on the Fitz John Porter case at a recent meeting, by passing resolutions protesting against his restoration to the army and thanking Congressman Brown for his vote and action to prevent the passage of the bill. The editor of a democratic paper in an adjoining county, the Emporium Independent, makes this action of the Eldred Post the text for nearly a column of editorial, replete with sneers at the intelligence of that body and the choicest epithets from his inexhaustible vocabulary of abuse. The criticisms and abuse of this ancient reincarnation from the dead past is not of the slightest moment to any one. We only refer to it as an indication that despite all pretenses, the inborn hatred of the old time cross-roads, patent-sheet, democratic editor toward the boys in blue and all their acts is never-dying, and will only expire when the animal is "too dead to skin." The editor of the Independent would no doubt like to see Porter restored, whether innocent or guilty. Indeed, we presume he would not object to see every regular army officer who deserted his flag, and drew his sword against the government restored. The surviving soldiers think differently. Emanating from that body the votes of those who were aided in their rebellion against the flag by Porter's disobedience of orders on the field and congress would refuse to restore him. The members of the Grand Army of the Republic did not seek the approbation or love of the ancient copperhead twenty years ago, and they have no desire or use for it now

Sunday Amusements.

There seems to be a large class of people in Bradford city who look upon the Sabbath day only as a holiday to be devoted to amusement and pleasure seeking. The proprietors of the opera house in that city are money getting men, and have no scruples against catering to the demands of this careless unthinking element, and have on various occasions opened their doors on Sunday evenings to questionable performances,—especially questionable for a Sunday occupation. The latest was a so-called spiritual seance last Sunday evening. About 800 sensation seeking, men, women and boys were attracted hither and as was to be expected were made fools of by the fraudulent "medium" and his more worthless and disreputable manager. An average Bradford audience may be very intelligent, but when it will allow two such mountebanks and professional dead beats as Davenport and his manager to bamboozle $70 clean money from its pockets for a single Sunday show it is not very creditable to its intelligence. The manager has been to Bradford before as manager of the filthiest and most obscene gangs of people who have disgraced even the Gem Theatre, and he evidently knows how to "work" a Bradford audience. Many of the victims have rushed into print with loud complaints against Wagner & Reis, the owners of the opera house. These gentlemen may not be blameless, but they are like all showmen—they want to give the public what it calls for and will pay for —and like many others, they, too, "are not there for their health" and are not engaged in missionary work. If 800 or 1000 people people in Bradford are crying for a Sunday show, Wagner & Reis will give them the best of the kind on the road, whether it is an "ex Rev." scoffer at religion, a spiritualistic medium or a traveling lecturer.

Borough Lots.

In another column Mr. L. Rogers offers for sale a number of very eligible building lots in this borough. It is but recently that these lots could be placed on the market, and they offer some of the finest sites for homes that can be found in the borough. The prices and terms are very reasonable, and persons of moderate means wishing to obtain homes of their own should improve this opportunity

Colonel Beath, of Philadelphia, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic of the United States, states the number at 235,000. In the last six months the order has gained 42,000. Large gains have been made in the western states. The gain there was due to a great extent to the migration of veterans to those states. Pennsylvania still has the lead of the states, having about 413 posts. New York follows with 434 posts, but has a smaller membership than Pennsylvania. There are in the order about 4,000 posts, distributed all over America. Posts are rapidly being organized in Europe and elsewhere. The largest post is at Columbus, Ohio, and has over 1,000 members. The order during the past year dispensed $182,000 for charitable purposes, and has been efficient in building homes for soldiers, sailors, widows and orphans.

BRADFORD.

Mayor Euthaton has commenced to tear down his hotel building on the Public square, and will erect a larger and better one in its place.

The injunction applied for by the Consolidated Bottling company to prevent a rival firm—Woodbury & Campbell—from continuing business, was refused by the court Tuesday

Professor Stone has purchased $600 worth of chemical apparatus for use in the schools. The library in the new school house is fast being filled up with books and a number of newspapers are being placed on file

Wild ducks have made their appearance here and quite a number have been killed by sportsmen. There is a law against shooting them in the spring which was passed last spring but there doesn't seem to be many aware of the fact

The correspondent of the Era who reported the Clark murder trial remarked that the "case was being conducted in a gentlemanly and courteous manner, and not in the bulldozing and pettifoging way that some of our lawyers did at Smethport" or words to that effect. If the case had been conducted on the defense with a little more vigor and a little less of that "courteousness," Clark would had stood a good deal better chance for his life. A good lawyer would have saved his neck, or at least ought to on the evidence that was produced. The correspondent has, from our own knowledge had a little more of the law at Smethport than he desired.

Bradford people were badly fooled by a snide "medium," who advertised to give a seance at the opera house Sunday evening. A large crowd went there and found that it was the sickest attraction that had ever visited Bradford. The only person that appeared on the stage was the star actor Davenport by name. After talking some and showing two or three tricks, all of which occupied about three quarters of an hour, he announced the close of the performance. Eight hundred more disgusted people were never seen here before and Davenport came within an ace of being mobbed. Only his fleetness of foot in getting to his hotel saved him

A coroner's inquest was held on the body of Dennis Ryan who died from injuries received by being thrown from an unmanageable hand car on the R. & P. last week. Although some of the jurors were strongly inclined to censure the railroad company for not having a sufficient brake on the car as it was found to be very insufficient by the jury they were finally prevailed upon to let it go. One of the jurors remarked that it was only a dead Mick anyway. There is no doubt but what the company were very much to blame in the matter however, and that they knew it was evident from the fact that they had their attorney present at the inquest, and taking some part in it, as he certainly should not have done

The gymnasium association that was formed last summer could not be called exactly a success. It was started with a good deal of enthusiasm and about $300 were paid in to purchase the necessary apparatus but in a short time the treasurer skipped out and carried some of the money with him. It ran all right then for three months, when they were forced to move into new quarters. In a short time the members were shut out without notice of any kind by the oil exchange janitor locking up the building. Why it was done no one seems to know, as there ought to be plenty of money in the treasury—enough certainly to pay the rent. If there is not some of the members would like to know where it has all gone to. A few of the members tried to get even with the concern by taking out some of the dumb-bells, Indian clubs, etc., and now the officers seem to have suddenly wakened up from their all winter sleep and propose to make those persons trouble

Early Marriages.

Hazleton Plain Speaker

It seems that a great many boys—for what else are they at the age of twenty or even twenty one?—are rushing into matrimony nowadays depending entirely upon their very small salaries for home comforts and the necessaries of life, never dreaming of the drawbacks in the shape of sickness, etc. This is eminently wrong. There should be a law requiring a young man to state before a court his ability to care for and support a wife if he married her. The fact of the matter is this business of mere boys getting married should be stopped. Many and many a time, after marriage, they have hard work to support their family. They lose their situations, get ill, or something of the sort. Then they get into debt, never get out, live a hard weary life, and heartily wish they had never heard of marriage. Love is all very well, but one can't make three meals a day out of it, and it won't pay house rent and board bills. Some of the younglings think only of the blissful future with no storms, no heavy expense and all that. We do not desire to discourage early marriages, but do say most emphatically that the young man who goes into this business had better understand the cost, responsibilities and tribulations. And when they can barely support themselves, it is nothing but ridiculous madness to tie themselves to others. If the young gentlemen will kindly roll a little of the above into their cigarettes, after dinner and smoke it, they will find it to set well

"Won't you come in the parlor and sit a little while, George, dear?"

"N—no, I guess" not, replied George, hesitatingly

"I wish you would," the girl went on. "It's awful lonesome. Mother has gone out and father is up stairs groaning with rheumatism in both legs."

"Both legs?" asked George.

"Yes, both legs."

"Then I'll come in a little while."

A Teacher's Views on the Superintendency.

ED MINER—As the question of the election of superintendent is being so freely discussed at present, I think it advisable for the teachers of the county to express their opinion in the matter. I have heard the opinion of a great many of my fellow teachers, and with very few exceptions they are anxious for the re-election of Mr Campbell. We claim in the first place that he, during the past three years, has discharged the duties of his office in a fair, impartial manner, that he has spared himself no pains or trouble in providing the best instructors for us at our institutes, and that he has labored faithfully to advance the educational interests of McKean county. We can't see any advantage to be derived by frequent changes of superintendents, as it takes considerable time to learn the abilities of the teachers and the conditions of the schools. Mr Campbell has served one term, and now thoroughly understands what is needed, and what material he has to work with. I understand there are some old fogy directors in the county, who are endeavoring to prejudice more enlightened ones against him, on the plea that he has refused certificates to applicants because of their religion or even in one case because the lady's father differed from him in politics. Of course this is too ridiculous to discuss. I do not agree with Mr Campbell on religious matters and if I were a man I would not belong to the same political party but I still claim that he is above all such narrow minded prejudices as he has been accused of, and I can vouch for the fact that there is no foundation for such reports. If anyone wishes to investigate the matter by examining the papers of the deeply wronged teachers they will doubtless be satisfied that there were very valid reasons for refusing them certificates. I for one am very anxious to see Mr Campbell re-elected and in saying this I am sure I express the sentiment of the majority of teachers of McKean county

THE BEST OF ALL LINIMENTS

FOR MAN AND BEAST.

For more than a third of a century the Mexican Mustang Liniment has been known to millions all over the world as the only safe reliance for the relief of accidents and pain. It is a medicine above price and praise—the best of its kind. For every form of external pain the

MEXICAN

Mustang Liniment is without an equal. It penetrates flesh and muscle to the very bone—making the continuance of pain and inflammation impossible. Its effects upon Human Flesh and the Brute Creation are equally wonderful. The Mexican

MUSTANG

Liniment is needed by somebody in every house. Every day brings news of the agony of an awful scald or burn subdued, of rheumatic martyrs restored, or a valuable horse or ox saved by the healing power of this which speedily cures such ailments of the HUMAN FLESH as Rheumatism, Swellings, Stiff Joints, Contracted Muscles, Burns and Scalds, Cuts, Bruises and Sprains, Poisonous Bites and Stings, Stiffness, Lameness, Old Sores, Ulcers, Frostbites, Chilblains, Sore Nipples, Caked Breast, and indeed every form of external disease. It heals without scars.

For the BRUTE CREATION it cures Sprains, Swinny, Stiff Joints, Founder, Harness Sores, Hoof Diseases, Foot Rot, Screw Worm, Scab, Hollow Horn, Scratches, Windgalls, Spavin, Thrush, Ringbone, Old Sores, Poll Evil, Film upon the Sight and every other ailment to which the occupants of the Stable and Stock Yard are liable.

The Mexican Mustang Liniment always cures and never disappoints; and it is, positively,

D. Langell's Asthma and Catarrh Remedy.

Having struggled 20 years between life and death with ASTHMA or PHTHISIC, treated by eminent physicians and receiving no benefit, I was compelled, during the last five years of my illness to sit on my chair day and night gasping for breath; my sufferings were beyond description. In despair I experimented on myself by compounding roots and herbs and inhaling the medicine thus obtained. I fortunately discovered this WONDERFUL CURE FOR ASTHMA and CATARRH, warranted to relieve the most stubborn case of ASTHMA IN FIVE MINUTES, so that the patient can lie down to rest and sleep comfortably. Any person not fully satisfied after using one-third of a box, can return the remainder to the proprietor and the money will be refunded, or send me your address for a trial package FREE OF CHARGE. Mrs. W. T. Brown, Monroe, Texas, writes: "I suffered with Asthma 30 years. Your Remedy completely cured me. I wish all afflicted with Asthma and Catarrh to send for it. Publish this for the benefit of the afflicted." Should your druggist not keep the remedy, I can send it by mail on receipt of price $1.00. For sale by all druggists. Address D. LANGELL, Appleton, Ohio.
